Profiles of Power –
Four Influential Interest Groups

AARP, formerly the American Association of Retired People

Membership: 40 million Americans, mostly over 50

Location: Washington, DC

Web site: www.aarp.org

AARP began as an organization of retired teachers and has grown in the last three decades to a mass organization serving more than 40 million members. With a membership fee of only $16 per year, members are entitled to magazines and information, lobbying on their behalf, and access to purchase medical insurance, automobile insurance and travel services. AARP’s political power derives from its huge membership, its ability to communicate to its members, and its mission to serve the needs of seniors. The group is now one of the best financed in Washington with an annual revenue base of $1.1 billion. Critics point out that AARP doesn’t really offer insurance but lends its name and membership to other corporations, which pay royalties of $700 million a year to AARP. In 2013, AARP spent $9.6 million on lobbying Congress.

The Nature Conservancy

Membership: 1 million through subscriptions to the magazine

Location: Fairfax, Virginia

Web site: www.nature.org

The Nature Conservancy is one of the largest and most successful environmental groups in the world, with total lobbying expenditures for 2012 of $900 million. The Conservancy is often criticized by other environmental groups because it is very willing to partner with private property owners, corporations and the states to purchase and save specific tracts of land. It is seen as being more favorable to private ownership and capitalism than many other environmental interest groups. However, it has successfully purchased and preserved millions of acres of land, reefs, and seabed around the world. The organization has net assets of more than $5.2 billion.

Profiles of Power – Four Influential Interest Groups

Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America (PhRMA)

Membership: Only about 50, including all of the major drug-makers in the world. The list is available on PhRMA’s website.

Location: Washington, D.C.

Web site: PhRMA.org

During the debate over the Patient Protection and Affordability Act (the Obama health care plan), PhRMA was considered one of the most influential players, working on the behalf of its corporate members to keep the government from regulating the cost of drugs. While the overall finances of the association are not public, the not-for-profit arm, PhRMA Foundation distributes hundreds of thousands of dollars to scholarship and research each year, and the interest group itself spent more than $17.8 million on lobbying in 2013.

Service Employees International Union (SEIU)

Membership: 2.1 million

Location: Washington, D.C.

Web site: www.seiu.org

One of the fastest growing unions in the country, the SEIU played an important role in the election of President Barack Obama. With its growth concentrated among public workers, the union saw the election of a progressive president as essential to the welfare of its members. SEIU has been a major campaign contributor for Democratic party candidates. In the 2012 election cycle, the organization donated $18 million to candidates and outside organizations. In addition, the union spent about 23 million on “independent” expenditures for advertising and other forms of communication in 2012. The organization reported that it spent about $900,000 on lobbying in 2013.
